

Educating the World

NAZRIN BANU BINTE ABDUL RAZACK

Nurse Educator
Parkway East Hospital

As a Nurse Educator, Nazrin Banu Binte Abdul Razack firmly believes that education is a powerful tool. "I see myself as a change agent. I hope that, through education, I can help to raise nursing standards, uplift the profession and change the way the world views us. I am also honoured that my work touches the lives of many nurses. I want to build relationships and partner nurses throughout their journey. To do that well, I believe it is important to focus on where they want to be and how they want to get there, and support them every step of the way," she said.

Her advice to anyone considering a career in nursing? "It's tough. There will be many roadblocks along the way. But if you have the perseverance and passion to go the distance, you will realise that nursing is truly unlike any other profession."

"My work is probably nothing more than a drop in the ocean but I am positive that every drop makes a difference."

In her words...

"My mother tried to dissuade me from becoming a nurse because it's a tough job. She only gave in when she saw how determined I was. Later, when I encountered a student nurse on the verge of quitting, I was able to empathise and encourage her. I'm happy to share that she continued her studies and is doing well today."
